A Sir, the only conclusion on the hair examination that I was going to make was its origin.

Q That is pretty serious about whose hair it is. That is a fundamental question you were being asked.

A That is correct.

Q So, you say the only question you were being asked--that is the important question you were being asked?

A That is correct.

Q All right, now, in order that you not be misled in any way, didn't you ask Mr. Murtagh over there--then Captain Murtagh--to tell you, "Find out what this laboratory has done because I don't want to make any mistakes because they have done some treatment or process to it that could affect my examination"?

A It was my understanding that the evidence was in its original condition.

Q You got that understanding from whom--the CID investigator who had collected it?

A No, from Mr. Murtagh when he brought all of the evidence in.

Q Oh, you mean that he was the source of what the lab had done, right, or not done?

A Not the source. He was the courier that
